

Michael Lian, PT, DPT

Growing up, whenever I got hurt, my family was always there to give me advice on how to get better, and I love them for that. However, the medical advice from aunts and uncles isn't always grounded in the best science and research.

My goal is to provide the best care, therapy, and teaching, all guided by the latest research and best practices. It's also important to keep sessions interesting and engaging for all of my patients.

If you're eager to learn about what's going on with your body, you'd be hard pressed to find somebody more willing to explain things than me.
