

Shane Oliver, PT

In 2002, I graduated from California State University Long Beach (CSULB) with a bachelor's degree in Kinesiology. I decided to continue on at CSULB to earn a master's degree in Physical Therapy, which I completed in 2005.

Patients often ask me what inspired me to be a physical therapist. I was introduced to physical therapy through an injury during high school football and after my rehabilitation was complete, I knew I wanted to become a Physical Therapist.

My goal is to help the "weekend warriors" return to their athletic endeavors. I focus on manual therapy, personalized exercises, and patient education to help patients improve their quality of life and return to the activities they enjoy.

When not working you can find me enjoying family time with my wife and son, who is now starting organized sports. In my true free time, I enjoy golfing and rooting for my favorite professional sports teams.

Fun Facts:

I enjoy Disneyland and all things Disney related. I collect Disney crystal figurines from Swarovski. During vacations, I enjoy traveling and hope to visit all the continents within my lifetime.
